Document 1. Extract from a local newspaper, Inverness (Scotland).

« For three years, Morag Sinclair, 74, has been walking the same path along the river every morning at seven. But since last spring, she hasn't been walking alone: about thirty people now join her, from a nine-year-old boy to a ninety-two-year-old former sailor. « I've been doing this since my husband died, » Morag explains. « One day, a neighbour asked if she could come. Then her friends came. » The group has been growing every month; they have even been collecting litter along the river since March, and they have filled more than 200 bags so far. « We've been talking to the council for weeks about new bins, » says Ewan, 16, the youngest regular walker. « They haven't answered yet, but we haven't been waiting for them: we bring our own bags. » »
